Like an Evil Spirit.

In olden times it was thought that evil spirits came in through cracks and keyholes. The generally approved way to keep them out was to plug up the keyholes and stop the cracks with cotton. Notwithstanding these preventive measures, the evil things had their own way and often came in as they pleased.

So comes malaria now-a-days. We try to keep it out of the keyhole and it comes in by the crack. We stop up the crack, and lo! it comes from a leak in the plumbing, or an opening from some neglected drain, or from some unsuspected source and unguarded direction.

We cannot always keep malaria out, but we can give it battle and drive its effects from our systems. If BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is taken in time, malaria has not a ghost of a chance. This is the great family medicine. Your druggist sells it, and you ought to keep a bottle in the house.

Lesson VII.—Aug. 12.

THE LAST DAYS OF JOSHUA.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Choose ye this day whom ye will serve.—Josh. 24: 15.

TOPICS.—The exhortation given. The response made. The covenant renewed.

Notes and Hints.

Connecting Link.—After the cities of refuge were established, there was a little more fighting with hostile people, after which peace prevailed for eighteen years, when the death of Joshua occurred in the twenty-fifth year of his rule over the Israelites. He was nearly one hundred and ten years old. He made a farewell address to the people, from which this lesson is taken.

1. The exhortation given. Joshua was drawing near to the end of his days. Knowing well the character and disposition of the people over whom he had been appointed commander-in-chief, and whom, under divine guidance, he had led to a nearly complete conquest of the land, and whom he had ruled for twenty-five years, he gathered them together to give to them once more such counsel as he knew they needed. He called the elders, chief men, heads of families, rulers and judges, to the front, that they might realize the importance of their relations to the people. They were the ones who could shape the policy of the nation, and lead the people to such practices as they deemed wise and right. He recalled to their minds the wonderful history of their nation, the grand events in which Jehovah had manifested himself as their guide and guardian, and then gave them a strong and stirring exhortation to "fear the Lord and serve him in sincerity and truth." He knew the debasing influences by which they were surrounded and which were continually operating upon them; he knew, also, the strong tendency in their dispositions toward idolatry, and he felt the importance of again bringing fresh before their minds the superiority of the God of Israel to all the gods of the heathen around them, and of renewing, in the most solemn and impressive manner, the covenant already existing between Jehovah and themselves. After bringing the matter clearly and definitely before them, he called upon them to choose for themselves, then and there, whom they would serve, whether the gods of the heathen, or the God of Israel. He placed the responsibility upon them; he called them to the exercise of the noblest power given to human beings, the power of free choice. At the same time he set them a good example and gave the weight of his influence in favor of the right side, saying, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

11. The response made. The people seem to have been stirred by the glowing words of their chief, who had already announced to them that he was near the hour of his departure. They promptly made answer without a dissenting voice, "God forbid that we should forsake the Lord to serve other gods." They repeated briefly what Joshua had already declared at length, concerning the wonderful works of the Lord in their behalf, and declared resolutely their purpose to serve him, affirming that he was their God. Thus they stood committed before Joshua, before the people, before one another and before God, to be true to his worship. Joshua reminded them of God's holiness and that he would not accept a divided service. They reaffirmed their determination to serve him faithfully, and he called them to take notice that by this public commitment, they became witnesses against themselves. Then, for the third time, they declared that they would serve the Lord and obey his voice.

111. The covenant renewed. The people having thus fully and freely renewed their allegiance to Jehovah, Joshua proceeded to make their act more impressive and their pledge more binding, by writing their words in the book of the law of God, and by setting up a great stone under an oak-tree that stood by the sanctuary of the Lord. Thus there was a permanent record of the transaction in the archives of the nation, and a visible reminder of it in a place where it would be seen frequently, and so prevent them from forgetting the obligation they had, of their own choice, taken upon themselves.

This seems to have been the closing act of Joshua's public life. He was a most remarkable man. Some writers on military affairs have pronounced him the ablest commander the world has ever seen, not merely the greatest general of his age, but of any age. As a statesman, he is entitled to a high rank, for he showed great wisdom and executive ability in organizing and settling the people whom he had led to a substantial conquest of the land into which they had gone by divine direction. The lesson brings before us the ever recurring duty of choosing for ourselves whom we will serve. Again and again, all along our journey, the question comes up, and we must choose to-day. We can not evade the duty, nor shirk the responsibility. If we say we will not choose, by that very saying we do choose, and the record is made up accordingly. Somewhere there will be found a witness against us, and we shall bring ourselves into judgment according to our actions. None of us will drift into the service of God. It must be chosen. This power of choosing, which links us to our divine Creator, must be exercised, and upon the use we make of it depend eternal interests.

WHAT GEORGE WAS THINKING ABOUT.

BY KATE UPPIN CLARK.

One day with George, on three year old, a winsome little lad, I walked abroad,—all smiling he, For not a sorrow had he; When, just a little past our door, We met a poor old creature; His mouth was puckered, sharp his nose, And sharp his every feature.

My little's smile quick disappeared. He brow drew very sober. I little guessed his thought; but mused The shadow that passed over. "Poor man!" I sighed aloud, "He clouds All whom he meets! He should be!" "He's just like me!" lisped George, "He tried To whistle, and he couldn't!"

White Hands.

BY MARY BAKER.

Poor Kitty! There she sat, under the shade of an old oak tree, thinking, and of what? Overhead in the branches the birds were chirping and twittering as if glad of such a lovely day. The sun shone through the leafy covering, as though it were very happy, only on little Kitty's face was there the shadow of a frown. At her feet lay a handkerchief she had been hemming; but now she sat with her hands folded idly in her lap and I am sure if you would look closely you would see tears in her eyes.

"Oh, don't!" she sighed, "I wish I had nice white hands like Marion Hill," and her eyes that have been looking on her little brown hands, turn away, and gaze on a large brown house where Marion lives—a house, despite all its grandeur, not so pretty as Kitty's house—a tiny white cottage almost covered with roses and fragrant honeysuckle, and just inside the door Kitty's mamma is rocking four year old Charlie to sleep. It is a sweet pretty place, and I wonder Kitty has eyes for any other. But I don't think Kitty is the only discontented one in the world; but let us listen to her. What is she saying?

"I do wish I had white hands! Marion Hill says mine are brown and ugly."

Marion! Was that? I fancy I heard a laugh. Yes, Kitty heard it also, and turning her head what do you think she saw? Marion? No. Her mamma? No. You could never guess. It was a real live fairy, the most beautiful thing Kitty had ever dreamed of. Her blue eyes opened very wide as she gazed on the little lady who sat on a tiny flower so cosily, and was laughing merrily at Kitty's surprise. In her hand was a silver wand which she waved before Kitty's astonished vision.

"What is your name, little girl?" and her voice was like the tinkle of tiny golden bells.

"Kitty, ma'am, Kitty Kennedy," said the little girl.

"Well, mine is Grant-All-Wishes," Kitty looked incredulous. "I suppose you think that a very queer name," said the fairy; "but to prove it is true, tell me what is the dearest wish you have?" Kitty held her breath. What should she wish for? After a little silence the fairy again spoke. "Come, little girl, you must hurry; I have

Farm, Garden and Household.

Stable Ventilation.

Many owners of stock seem to be afraid of fresh air as a climber action, says the examiner. When cold weather comes, they barricade their stables as closely as possible against the outer air, and having by this means secured warmth, believe they have made their stock safe and comfortable. This is a serious error. Cattle and horses require fresh air as much as human beings do, and the same evil results follow in their case as in that of men and women shut up in a confined atmosphere. Under prolonged exposure to such a poisoned air, delicate animals soon become debilitated and constitutional tendencies to disease are liable to be developed which might have remained latent or have been outlived under more favorable conditions. Even strong, healthy cattle lose vitality in a close, unventilated stable. It is the part of economy, therefore, to provide suitable ventilation for the stable; and in doing so it should be remembered that not only the consumption of air by the confined animals—equal to about 4,000 gallons for a full grown beast during every twenty-four hours—but the exhalations from their excrement must be taken into the account. Nor must it be forgotten that while an abundance of fresh air is essential to health, warmth is equally so. The problem is to secure thorough ventilation without unduly lowering the temperature. Especially should draughts about the feet, as though cracks in the floor communicating with the outer air, be carefully guarded against. All this involves expenses; but the outlay for healthy winter quarters for live stock is soon recovered. The food given does its work better; the stock fatten more rapidly and in better condition, and so sell for a higher price at less cost for production; work animals are stronger and more enduring, and hence do better service on the same expenditure for food and care; and the loss from disease, as carefully conducted experiments prove, is very greatly reduced. The stable need not be a palace; but its arrangements for securing warmth and fresh air should be as complete, in their degree, as those of a house for human habitation—a good deal more complete, indeed, than most people seem to think essential.

Propagation by Cuttings.

About the last of July is a propitious time for putting into soil cuttings of shrubs of all sorts, including roses and dwarf-growing evergreens. The young shoots are ripe enough then not to go into decay so readily, and yet there remains enough of the summertime of growth to heal up the wound at the base of the cutting with soft callus from which extensions will protrude that will become active roots. But this takes place slowly, requiring months with the slower growers, and the art of the propagator consists, first, in selecting suitably half-ripe cuttings, and then in keeping them through all this time of slow, weak movement, unharmed by burning sun, or parching wind, or leaching wet.

A corner shaded from full sun and wind is selected, and choice, fine sandy soil is used, with free drainage. The cuttings—two to six inches long—retain their leaves, and these must be prevented from wilting by retaining moisture about them until they have ceased their functions and ripened. For they digest and supply the organized material of which the callus and its projections are composed. A small bed of cuttings can be put in a trench or a board frame about six inches deep and so narrow that panes of glass can be laid across to retain moist air. Water can be given around this as needed, so that the cuttings receive moisture without being drenched.

In damp weather the glass can be taken off, and if much loaded with condensed drops the panes may be turned. In larger beds a more screen jath suffices if the vines are gently sprinkled every day in dry weather. Children can readily be taught this mode of propagation, and may begin with choice tea roses, mock orange, hydrangeas or other flowering shrubs, and arbutus, or junipers. The base is usually cut square off with a keen knife close below a joint, and is protected by a covering of moss and the rooted cuttings in April.—Lewiston.

It is said that of the most common and useful of all the plants in the garden is the humble daisy. It is a plant of great utility, and its uses are many. It is a plant of great utility, and its uses are many. It is a plant of great utility, and its uses are many.

Agricultural Hints.

Woody pastures make poor and bitter butter. When a pasture is in a very foul condition it should be ploughed and planted with some good corn.

The chicken business is by no means a small affair, when we consider that the value of the eggs of the country amounts to over $70,000,000 per annum.

Fowls well fed and well cared for are always in good condition for the table or for laying, but when half starved and neglected they do not put on flesh nor produce many eggs.

In the feeding of young pigs skimmed milk stands at the head of food, and when there is plenty of that there need be no serious uneasiness about results. Cooking corn meal may be advantageously added in small quantities to the milk.

Learn to dry-pick chickens without tearing the skin instead of scalding them to remove the feathers. It helps the price about 20 per cent, saves the feathers dry and makes a finer flavored chicken for the table.

It is folly to turn under weeds that have gone to seed, for the seeds of most weeds, no matter how deeply buried, will retain their vitality and make rapid growth so soon as they are brought near the surface.

Hens usually pull out their feathers more or less, when infested with lice or some skin disease, the result of being compelled to roost in a filthy place. Try cleansing their vents and rubbing with oilment made of sulphur and lard under the wings and over the body of your fowls.

The most profitable time to dispose of hens which you do not intend to keep another year is just before moulting. Watch the flocks closely the latter part of the summer and when a veteran has evidently finished her litter kill at once. 'Twill cost a third of all she is worth to grow a new coat of feathers and fatten her again.

One cow well fed and cared for is worth two that are poorly fed and cared for. Many a dairy might give away half the cows and make money by it. It is the same with the farm. One field well manured and tilled is worth half a dozen that are neglected. The owner of the former will always be poor; that of the latter will always be poor; a poor man becomes a poor farmer.

The worm-infested fruit begins to fall now, and should be picked up and fed to the hogs to prevent the worm, enclosed within it, from living to continue the propagation of his species. Where this plan has been followed for a number of years this pest of our orchards has been greatly reduced in numbers, and if every farmer would practice this method, the quality of the fruit would be greatly improved. If apples are boiled, and a little meal and the skimmed milk mixed with them, the hogs eat them readily, and thrive wonderfully.

Start the plow this month. If not too dry, grass seed may be sown without grain this month or early in September, and the same will be fit for mowing next summer if the land is in good condition. If it is not, manure will make it so, or if manure is scarce use from 400 to 500 pounds of some good artificial fertilizer or of finely ground bone per acre. This gives as good a catch and vigorous growth this fall as manure, though it may be necessary to top dress a meadow started in this way sooner than it would be if it received twenty loads of good manure at the commencement. The artificial fertilizer is less expensive, however, than the manure would be if bought at city or village stables.

Household Economy.

BY MARY WINCHESTER.

Liquid glue may be made by dissolving glue in strong, hot vinegar, and adding one-fourth as much alcohol and a little alum. This will keep any length of time when placed in a closely stoppered bottle and will mend horn, wood and mother-of-pearl.

To restore the beauty of faded velvet invert a hot flat-iron and place on it a cotton cloth folded several times and wet. Lay on this the velvet, wrong side next the cloth, and raise the pile gently with a soft brush. Two persons can do this more conveniently than one.

A wet umbrella should be left with the handle downward to drain and dry. It will last much longer when cared for in this manner, as it will dry quickly.

Hang up kitchen utensils as much as possible. It saves trouble when sweeping and it is convenient to know just where to find things when they are wanted in a hurry.

Stores and iron ware should be heated gradually the first time they are used. Rub the rusty spots on a stove with sand-paper and then with kerosene.

To clean a browned porcelain kettle boil peeled potatoes in it. The porcelain will be rendered nearly as white as when new.

To remove paint splashed upon window-panes use hot solution of soda and a soft brush.

Kerosene and powdered lime, whiting or wood ashes will clean tin with very little trouble.

If a shirt bosom or other article has been scorched in ironing, lay it where bright sunshine will fall directly on it.

It will take the search out completely. Books that have been handled during recovery from scarlet fever should be burned after they have served their purpose for the patient, as such books frequently become charged with the germs of the disease.

Discolored ivory may be whitened by rubbing it with a paste composed of burnt pumice stone and water, and then place it under glass in the sun.

The strong light of the sun should never be allowed to fall directly upon a mirror. The amalgam or union of the foil and mercury which is spread on glass to form a looking-glass is easily ruined by the direct continued exposure to the solar rays, causing the glass to look misty.

Recipes for the Table.

GOOSEBERRY JAM.—Top and tail the berries, and wash them perfectly clean; drain, wash and weigh them; take equal quantities of berries and white sugar, stir them well together; put them in a preserving kettle and boil for one hour, stirring them constantly to keep them from burning; put in jelly glasses, cover with brandy paper. Serve with cold meats.

GINGER BEER.—Two pounds of brown sugar, one table-spoonful of cream-tar, and one of ground ginger; pour over the above mixture two gallons of boiling water, putting in two lemons sliced with the skins on. Stir it well and let it stand until milk warm, then add half a pint of yeast. Stir it thoroughly and set aside to settle, which will require twelve hours; then pour it off carefully and strain it through thin muslin or gauze, and bottle it. It will be fit for use in three or four days.

CORN FRITTERS.—Six ears of green corn grated from the cobs, as fine as possible; three well-beaten eggs; a tablespoonful and a half of flour; season with salt and pepper; mix well; drop a tablespoonful at a time in boiling lard and butter mixed; fry brown and serve hot.

CHERRY PRUNES.—Put in a baked dish one quart of seeded cherries; sweeten to taste. Take a piece of light roll dough and make it into ten small rolls; lay them in the pan on top of the cherries; set them in a warm place, and when perfectly light cover them and put in the oven. In fifteen minutes take off the cover and let them brown. Serve at once. Berries of any kind may be used instead of cherries.

CUCUMBERS.—Peel three fresh cucumbers and a small onion, lay them in cold water for an hour, then slice them and sprinkle with salt; let them lie until ready to serve, then squeeze them slightly; put them in a dish and pour over them a half-tea cup of cream and the same amount of vinegar; season with pepper.

Fashion Notes.

Little modified poke hats of coarse white straw look very pretty when trimmed with white mull, long ends of the same crossing in the back and tying loosely under the chin.

The newest jet bonnets are made of large beads strung on wire and mounted in a trellis pattern, there being no foundation, so the hair is visible. Others have the latticed beads over a gilt frame, and gold lace edges the brim.

Mills are not fashionable for tall dress, and why this should be so is unexplainable. They are so becoming—more so to a pretty hand—and comfortable. However, some young ladies do wear them, and tie them to the waist and arm by narrow velvet ribbon.

Dresses made entirely of lace are draped with pompon bows over orange, pink, straw and cream color. The bodices are generally of velvet the same color as the satin underneath the lace, and are opened in the front and cut square in the back, but not low.

Lavender water is much appreciated during the summer by those who use it. It is well to saturate the handkerchief with this delicate perfume, and also the handkerchief or sitting-room. It is pleasant and cooling to the skin, and the odor is never overpowering, no matter how much it is used.

Dresses, hats and parasols in the new shades of red, congealite, fawn, flambé or incense are made to look a trifle subdued when covered with ruffles of deep eury lace. The Spanish lace looks very effective, but the coarse Russian lace better. A pretty morning toilet in this effect can be made of scarlet saten covered with the lace, a hat to correspond, and a parasol of eury pongee lined with scarlet being worn with the toilet.

As a rule perfumers are not so much used as they were some time ago. The little scented powder-bags sewed in the dresses and mantles are considered enough, and no lady uses more than one kind of perfume, for the effect produced if she does is sometimes very far from pleasant. A little scented sachet placed in each human drawer will keep the clothes perfumed and sweet. They may be filled with Sandalwood, orange root or pot-pouri.

How Does Compound Oxygen Cure?
It answers in two important ways: First, by a rapid purification of the blood, and secondly, by a larger supply of oxygen to the tissues, the Compound Oxygen having, in its composition, the most perfect and purest form of oxygen known to chemistry. A new and healthy action is at once set on foot, and the general improvement follows as a matter of course. If you wish to know all about this new and remarkable remedy, the use of which is rapidly extending all over the world, call on Dr. J. C. STARKER & SONS, New York, 111 Grand Street, Philadelphia, for their Treatise on Compound Oxygen. It will be mailed free.

DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.

A Household Article for Universal Family Use.

ERADICATOR OF MALARIA.
For Scarlet and Typhoid Fevers, Diphtheria, Rubeola, Measles, Eruptions, Ulcers, Small Pox, Mumps, etc.

all Contagious Diseases, Typhoid, Measles, etc. The fluid should be used. Scarlet Fever has never been known to spread where the Fluid was used. Yellow Fever has been cured with it after black vomit had taken place. The worst cases of Diphtheria yield to it.

SMALL-POX PREVENTED.
A number of my family was taken with Small-Pox. I used the Fluid; the patient was not delirious, was not pained, and was about the house again in three weeks, and no other family had it. J. W. PARKER, Philadelphia.

Diphtheria Prevented.
The physician here used Darby's Fluid very successfully in the treatment of Diphtheria. A. S. STARKER, Greenboro, Ala.

NEWPORT COUNTY NEWS.

PORTSMOUTH.

Tuesday, Thomas L. Abbot, who resides on Providence Island, came in a sloop to Portsmouth. When he was ready to return, and was holding his sail, the sloop parted, and he was thrown on the deck, and fell across the gunwale of the boat, breaking two ribs. He will be obliged to sit upright for sixteen days.

The works of the Taunton Copper Co., which have been lying mostly idle for some time past, were started up Monday. Benjamin Hall, who was driving in Fall River a few days ago, when his horse broke his leg, and it was necessary to kill the animal.

A special meeting of the Court of Probate called at the instance of the heirs of the late Levi Cory, was held Monday. John Roberts was appointed custodian of the estate of Levi Cory, deceased, and was empowered to sell at private sale such articles of personal property as he shall think best for the interest of the estate. The will of Mr. Cory gives his wife the rents and profits of all his real estate as long as she remains his widow, and after her to be divided among the children of the late Isaac S. Cory. He also gives her all his personal property remaining after paying his debts and funeral charges. She is named as executrix.

It is rarely that three deaths occur in our quiet town within a week, yet such was the fact, in the week preceding the 4th inst.

The first two were noticed in last week's issue, the third being Stephen Slocum who died suddenly on the 3d inst.

The funeral service of Levi Cory was held at the friend's Meeting House on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Friends Thomas B. Buffum of Middletown, Levi Almy and Joseph B. Macomber of this town, speaking from appropriate passages of Holy Scripture.

The funeral service of Stephen Slocum was at his late residence (Glen Road) on Tuesday, 8th inst. The day was as pleasant as could be, and the attendance was large. The dinner of chowder, clams, sweet potatoes, green corn, etc., was one of the best, and every one seemed to be satisfied, and the result must inevitably be a pecuniary success, and the treasury well replenished.

The ladies of St. Paul's Church are to be congratulated on the success of their clam bake and fair, at Bristol Ferry on Wednesday, 8th inst. The day was as pleasant as could be, and the attendance was large. The dinner of chowder, clams, sweet potatoes, green corn, etc., was one of the best, and every one seemed to be satisfied, and the result must inevitably be a pecuniary success, and the treasury well replenished.

The society of the Christian Church will have their annual clam bake, on Wednesday, 15th inst., on the Sandy Point Farm, now owned by F. M. Ware of Boston, Mass. This farm is the next south of the Glen. If stormy the bake will be next day if fair.

TOWN COUNCIL AND COURT OF PROBATE.—A special meeting of the Court of Probate was held at the town clerk's office on Monday last, all the members being present.

John Roberts was appointed custodian of the estate of Levi Cory, deceased, with power to sell at private sale such perishable property as he shall deem best for the interest of the estate.

An instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of the late Edmund Abbot, deceased, was presented, received, read and referred to the second Monday in September next with an order of notice in the town.

TOWN COUNCIL.—The following bills were allowed and ordered paid, viz.: of Overseers of the Poor, for funeral expenses of Hattie Macomber, $12; of Philip B. Chase, for table and six chairs for town clerk's office, $5.

FAMILY CLAM BAKE.—On Monday, 6th inst., Mr. Benj. F. Thomas, together with John B. F. Dunham, B. F. Downing, Jr., and others from Newport, enjoyed a family clam bake at his place, Mr. Thomas being master of ceremonies.

ATTENTION TAXPAYERS.—The collector of taxes has posted a notice that he will be at South Portsmouth Post Office to receive taxes, Aug. 23 from 8 A. M., until 2 P. M., and at the store, Geo. A. Weaver, Broadway, Newport, August 25th, from 8 A. M., until 2 P. M.

The members of the Christian Church of Portsmouth will give their annual clam bake in the orchard of F. M. Ware at the foot of Sandy Point Avenue, on Wednesday next. This is a new location, but one easy of access and very pleasant. It is expected that this will be a very fine bake. Tickets 60 cents.

MIDDLETOWN.—The 1st M. E. Church of Middletown, will give its annual clam bake at Southwick's Grove, on Wednesday August 22d. These bakes are always first class and are largely attended from Newport.

BLUE ISLAND.—Blue fish have "struck out" again at Block Island. Tuesday, two men are reported as having taken a hundred and three within half a mile of the shore at the Spring house, and another party of four took a hundred and fifty-three the same day within seven hours.

Southeast point, Block Island, under charge of Henry W. Clark, keeper of the light there, is to be used by the signal service department as a station for the display of the various warning signals.

TIVERTON.—Sunday a handsome yacht arrived at Stone Bridge bearing a distinguished party from Newport, consisting of Lord Mandeville and several other English noblemen. The party dined at the Lawton House, and pronounced the place one of surpassing beauty.

JAMESTOWN.—Fishing at Beaver Tail and other points on Conanicut is now very fine, and heavy weight bass yield to the rod and reel daily. A number of Newport's summer residents are there enjoying the sport in harmony with some enthusiasts.

stastic disciples of Isaac Walton, who are summering on the island.

The steam launch of Mr. Charles Wharton now floats a floating dock for her moorings in the little natural harbor at the base of High Hill, upon which is located Mr. Wharton's cottage.

Mr. Daniel Watson is the guest of Mr. Sidney Wolcott for a few days.

More than 100 laborers are engaged upon the stone villa now being built on "Horse Head" for Mr. Joseph Wharton of Philadelphia.

Some Indian implements of an interesting character were recently unearthed in the laying out of a new road on the Dimpling.

NEW ENGLAND ITEMS.

RHODE ISLAND.

Mrs. Fannie Sprague, mother of the ex-governor, has accepted the offer of the Union Company which bought her homestead, to lease it to her during her life at $1 per month. She accepts upon the advice of Gov. Butler, her counsel.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Inquirer & Mirror says that the valuation of personal property of Nantucket is $1,315,642, and of real estate $1,244,844; total, $2,560,486. There has been a slight falling off in the amount of personal property, and a considerable increase of taxable real estate. Rate of taxation $8 per $1000. Number of polls 908.

A number of New Bedford people have chartered a schooner for a two weeks' vacation cruise to New York and up the Hudson.

That "paunder" now troubles the dreams of some West Warren people on the Ware road. He is said by some to be as large as a fox, while others with magnifying-glass imaginations give him the size of a calf. He killed seventy-five chickens for Charles Shaw the other night, but only ate fifty of them, laying aside the rest in his refrigerator for future use.

The first collection of letters from the street boxes in the city of Boston took place Aug. 2, 1883, at 12 noon—twenty-five years ago. Fifty boxes were put up by Naham Capen, postmaster—the first, in the United States.

CONNECTICUT.

Connecticut's acreage of tobacco is decreasing yearly, and this year will be about 10,000 acres. The acreage of potatoes is larger than usual—about 32,000, and the crop is doing finely. The crop of corn has increased annually for the past few years in Connecticut, and may be set down for this year at 65,000 acres. It promises now to give a good crop, considerably above the average.

From New Haven, Ct., comes a ghost story. The wife of Paul Bohan died about four months ago, but it is alleged that her spirit still visits the earth. It was first seen by Mr. Bohan's mother, living in the house with him. Last Tuesday night, just after 12, as a young man was returning from an excursion, he saw and recognized the features of Mrs. Bohan, but, on speaking, the spirit vanished.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

An extensive programme has been arranged for four days' reunion of veterans at Weirs next month, in which is included a sham fight representing the battle of Malvern Hill.

The damage to crops and land in Stewartstown by the recent phenomenal hail storm will exceed $25,000, and that to roads and bridges over $2000. The loss falls heavily in several instances by reason of a similar disaster last season.

A reward has been offered by George W. Dunklee of Milford, N. H., for the recovery of the body of his son, E. L. Dunklee, who was drowned in Lake Winnepesaukee last week. The search has been permanently abandoned. It is said that of nearly fifty persons who have been drowned in this lake, not one single body has ever been recovered.

A bill will be introduced in the Legislature to-day authorizing the incorporation of the Tahanto Cotton Mill in Fisherville with a capital of $300,000. It is expected that ground will be broken within thirty days and that the foundation of the mill will be completed before the coming winter. The structure will be of brick and will be located at the "Borough" or Upper Falls on the Connecticut River about three-quarters of a mile from the heart of the village. Employment will be given to four hundred operatives. The number of spindles will be 17,500. Providence capital is largely interested.

VERMONT.

A most remarkable feat was performed by a cow at Bethel, Vt., recently. In getting home at night the cow made a short cut across lots, and in so doing fell or jumped from a ledge, which Mr. Goss, the owner of the cow, says is 90 feet in perpendicular height, and struck about 150 feet from where she started. She received some severe cuts, but was not damaged.

The Bennington monument committee have secured only two-thirds of their wished-for $120,000. They propose, however, to remove all buildings around the site of the monument that will interfere with the view of it and to put up a large, perfectly simple monument—probably of Bennington blue limestone—designed to be impressive amid its mountainous surroundings.

Now Captain M. H. Mooney, sheriff of Clinton County, N. Y., whom the papers pronounce a reliable witness, has seen the Lake Champlain "sea serpent." At first he thought it was a buoy or a log, but it disappeared and came up again within twenty rods of the yacht and stood up five feet from the water. The head was about eight inches across and ten inches from the top of the head to the jaw. The body was about as big as a sturgeon and twenty-five or thirty feet long.

Rescued from the Jaws of Death.
Verdict of Thousands.

Mrs. R. W. TREMPER, of Milton, Penn., writes, Nov. 26, 1882:—

"Enclosed please find postal order for five dollars and twenty-five cents, for half a dozen bottles of Hunt's Remedy. I keep a grocery store, and can sell more of your medicine than any drug-store, as I recommend it to all afflicted with kidney disease or dropsy. I tell them that, if they have life enough to swallow it, it will raise them from the dead for a fact; for it did raise me from that slumbering sleep, and, although this was over three years ago, I have had no kidney trouble since. Like the woman in Scripture, I had recourse to many physicians, and grew nothing better, but ever worse. But, thanks to Hunt's Remedy, I am raised as one from the dead."

The Most Skeptical Convinced.
Thousands feel a thrill of joy whenever they gaze upon the magical words, "Hunt's Remedy," for it is the best kidney and liver medicine ever known, and it recalls to memory the blessings it has proved to them. It is a positive remedy for all diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and urinary organs. The proprietors' names should be written in letters of gold, for few men have done so much for their suffering fellow-beings. One trial will convince the most skeptical, causing them to proclaim to all their friends the many virtues of this great medicine. The demand increases as it becomes known, and where it is best known the sales are the largest. As Mrs. Browning says, "Great is he who uses his greatness for all." This is what the proprietors of Hunt's Remedy do. Their great medicine is for all.—COR.
